We recommend two honest and good articles...

"In the near future, we may look back on the sunny green growthism ... as a form of denialism — one that we could not muster the courage and imagination to confront when we had the chance."

This article presents the case that civilization may fall very short of producing enough renewable energy to power its overpopulated, high-consumption societies... <https://www.truthdig.com/dig/green-tinted-glasses/>.

And Scientific American magazine just published an essay on the benefits of a smaller human population...
